28th Annual NAGPS National Conference, Hosted by GPC, at the University of Missouri

Columbia, Missouri –

On November 6th -9th the University of Missouri's Graduate Professional Conference (GPC) will host the 28th annual National Association of Graduate-Professional Students (NAGPS) conference.

Over 150 graduate students will attend the conference from more than 90 NAGPS member institutions. Founded in 1986, NAGPS advocates for post-graduate students across the United States in national policy matters.

MU's GPC won the bid to host the national conference after winning National Graduate Council of the year at last year's national conference. The conference will be an opportunity for graduate student governments from around the U.S. to share practices that aid students and affect campus policies. It will also highlight various national campaigns and policy issues that affect graduate students, such as the GradsHaveDebt2 campaign that was started by MU GPC's own Director of National Affairs, Jesse Kremenak. A business meeting will also be held where new national board officials are elected and changes in governing documents are approved.

Further information on the conference can be found by visiting, nagps.org/events/28th-annual-national-conference/.
